Since we've been bundling all the work together, we can knock out multiple projects in a single day. I mean, the bottom line, it's kind of common sense.

All right, let's start this thing.

Today, we have three poles we're placing with a helicopter. We have two we're placing with a vac truck, one with a UTV. And all these guys are really working their butt off.

By bundling these projects together, we're able to reduce costs, work faster, accelerating safety and reliability that our customers count on.

That's looking good right there.

When I'm driving around, I see work that we've done in the past. It's a cool feeling.