

PG&E - Marketing & Communications | Your Role in the Afternoon Activities

Welcome back, Mike Delaney.

[MUSIC PLAYING]

OK. All right. Marine was correct. Next up is lunch. But before we do that, a couple quick things. One is-- Patty often does this. I'm going to take a selfie with the crowd. Let's get this in here, people. This is good. It's the Innovation Summit. And then I'm also going to do it this way. Get a couple pictures of you. Because this is the group here that is going to make the difference in the world.

As I talked about in the morning, I'm in the business, and my mission is to change the world and have fun doing it. This is what we're doing. I'd just like to do one thing here. One is do-- let's do another round of applause to thank the panelists and speakers for their insights. Awesome.

[APPLAUSE]

Let's also-- I think one call out here as well. So we couldn't do this if this wasn't in California. And I want to give a special Thanks for the California Energy Commission, the California Public Utilities Commission, with their insight and their foresight to support innovation in a way that we don't see across the country, this is the place that we can make things happen.

So I also I want to thank them for that. So what we've got going on-- let me see. Are we on this? There we go. Great. OK. Afternoon agenda. What do we have coming up. So we've got lunch. That's next. Also encourage everyone, this is a great chance to go and see the innovations showcase. To go and see some of those stories about what we're doing today, what we took from last year's Innovation Summit to make a reality, to help live our mission, to help get to this point of 100% clean energy, safe, reliable, and lower cost than today.

Afternoon. This is where we're looking for you all to lean in. We've got breakout sessions. Take a look at the list. Figure out where you're going to go. We spent the morning bombarding you with insights. This is your chance to contribute. And so take a look. Think about which of those are that you want to spend time with. And then I'll just say one more thing. I'd love to have goals.

I'd love to do a little bit of that. And so I would invite you all to think about your goals for the afternoon. Three things. One is let yourself be surprised. So think about what you heard this morning. But also in these breakout sessions, it's a good chance to be like, hmm. That's interesting. Isn't that something different?

And so take that into those sessions and contribute back. Second is you've got time. Make a new connection, either at lunch or in a breakout session. And then finally, think about the afternoon as an opportunity to cultivate new ideas. This is not the time for us to go and say no to things. This is a time for us to go say yes. And think about what could be possible. We'll have plenty of time to go through and get to the right ones. The ones that are really impactful later on. So with that, I'll send you off to lunch, and let's just go. Thank you all. All right. Take care.

[APPLAUSE]

[MUSIC PLAYING]