

Wood Management Program

As part of our ongoing commitment to public safety, electric reliability and customer service, Pacific Gas and Electric Company (PG&E) is offering a program to safely dispose of wood from drought-impacted dead trees at no cost to customers.

This program is available to property owners located within counties where local or state emergencies were declared due to drought and bark beetle infestation. The program may only be in effect for a limited time.

Together, Building
a Better California

Wood Management Program

We will help residents and communities manage wood from dead trees resulting from California's drought and bark beetle infestation.

Does your wood qualify?

You are eligible to participate if both of the following apply:

- Wood is located on property in a qualifying county. Visit pge.com/treesandddrought for a list of qualifying counties.
- Wood is from trees cut down by our contractors to protect power lines.

How to participate:

1. Ask our on-site inspectors or tree workers for wood cleanup assistance, or call 1-800-PGE-5000 to request a site visit.
2. An inspector will contact you to schedule a site review to determine if your wood qualifies.
3. You will be informed if you are qualified for the Wood Management Program.

Public safety is our top priority.

We are helping communities impacted by years of drought and bark beetle infestation.

Our commitment to safety during these difficult times includes the following fire risk reduction measures:

- Additional patrols to inspect and remove dead or dying trees.
- Fund local Fire Safe Councils focused on fire fuel reduction, emergency access projects and public education.
- Fund daily evening aerial fire patrols in the summer and fall—when hot, dry weather conditions are at their peak and wildfires are most likely to ignite.

NOTE: This program is a special addition to our existing Vegetation Management Program and is only available for drought tree mortality work.
