

West Coast Lineman Rodeo Promo Video

AUDIO DESCRIPTION TRANSCRIPT

The opening shots of the video are in slow motion and show men climbing wooden utility poles. They are linemen. We also see linemen on the poles working in pairs to secure electric equipment. Workers on the ground use pulleys to deliver equipment to the men on the poles. Next there is aerial footage showing what looks like a fairground, but it also has a number of utility poles all in very close proximity.

The title reads, "West Coast Lineman's Rodeo is coming in Livermore". Now the footage speeds up and we see a number of fast shots of many men climbing up the poles quickly. It looks like they are competing against each other. Some of the images are shot from the point of view of the linemen on the poles looking down at the crowds. We see a man with "Event Judge" written on this orange safety vest. He watches and judges the competing linemen.

A slide reads, "Teams, apprentices sign up to participate in this fun, family event". We see children on a climbing wall having fun.

The next slide reads, "Family and friends invited with free lunch". We see a barbeque and people eating.

A helicopter delivers a lineman suspended by a cable to the top of an electric pole.

A slide reads, "The top competitors earn a trip to Kansas for the International Lineman's Rodeo in October." The next slide tells us that registration open soon.

The final slide says the Lineman's Rodeo contacts are:

Jeff Wilding whose email is JRW3 at pge dot com and Lawrence Kazmierski whose email is LAKF at pge dot com
