Site Name: San Francisco Service Center
Location: 18th and Shotwell Streets
San Francisco, California

Source, nature and approximate date of contamination: Since 1938, PG&E has used the San Francisco Service Center for storing and maintaining electrical equipment and other equipment essential to the distribution of gas and electricity, and for fueling and fleet vehicle maintenance activities. In 1988, PG&E performed an environmental assessment on a parcel being purchased for use as Service Center employee parking. Soil sampling during the assessment found petroleum hydrocarbons, solvents, and metals to be present in surface soils. The property had previously been used for retail, manufacturing (oakum, pottery, and terra cotta pipe), railroad operations, and vehicle maintenance. Residual petroleum hydrocarbons are known to remain near the locations of former underground storage tanks (USTs) in the Shotwell Complex of the Service Center. The tanks were removed in the late 1980s and the local oversight agency closed the cases following investigation and remediation.

Utility Operations Pertaining to the Site: PG&E has owned and operated the San Francisco Service Center since 1938. The Service Center has a customer service office and serves as a staging location for crews for the maintenance of the gas and electric distribution system in San Francisco. and fuels and maintains fleet vehicles at the Service Center. In 1988, PG&E purchased a triangular-shaped property (the Treat Avenue Parking Lot) to supplement parking at the Service Center.

Environmental Agency Actions: None at present. The City and County of San Francisco Department of Public Health (SDFPH) oversaw the removal of USTs at the Service Center between 1986 and 1990 and subsequent investigations and remediation. The SDFPH closed all the UST cases in 1999 as "Low Risk Fuel Hydrocarbon Sites".

Nature of Costs: Costs for the San Francisco Service Center for which the Company is seeking recovery are not being recovered in base rates or through any other recovery procedure. Any and all cleanup costs to be recorded by the Company in the HSM memorandum accounts will be hazardous waste cleanup costs found appropriate for recovery in the Hazardous Substance Cleanup Cost Recovery Collaborative Report.
