PG&E’s Triple Bottom Line

Serving People, the Planet, and California’s Prosperity

We are dedicated to building safer, resilient communities for our coworkers and our customers. Through our charitable giving program, we address critical social, educational and environmental challenges.

In 2021, PG&E and The PG&E Corporation Foundation, together with our more than 20,000 coworkers, supported, engaged, and participated in the communities we live and work in, through:

- $23M in charitable gifts
- 850+ grants to community-based organizations
- $5.9M+ in employee giving to nonprofit organizations
- 22,000+ employee volunteer hours
“As Californians we have all been affected by wildfires in recent years. PG&E is so thankful for the many nonprofit and community groups that have supported our neighbors before, during and after these disasters. We are blessed by their kindness and responsiveness, and we remain committed to helping them meet the needs of the hometowns we serve.”

PG&E Corporation Chief Executive Officer Patti Poppe

- PG&E committed nearly $1 million in charitable giving to wildfire relief, which focused on shelter and near-term resources, food security for vulnerable communities, and support for volunteer fire departments.

- PG&E and The PG&E Corporation Foundation then made an additional $1 million gift to the North Valley Community Foundation to support their especially hard-hit community.
Our Response by the Numbers

Nearly $2 million in grants to community-based organizations

32 grants supporting nonprofit organizations, volunteer fire departments, and community groups serving the hardest hit communities across Northern and Central California impacted through wildfire relief grants.

Food Banks are on the Frontlines

“The ongoing pandemic, coupled with wildfires devastating communities and forcing thousands of Californians to evacuate their homes for safety, are a one two punch. It’s critical that we all stand together to support our food banks, and to nourish and uplift every member of our community. We are grateful to PG&E for supporting our food banks and in turn helping to combat record levels of food insecurity and hunger.”

Stacia Levenfeld, CEO, California Association of Food Banks
We remain committed to our communities to help them respond, recover, and build back stronger from disasters.
