

Do you have a plan for your pet in an emergency?

Pets are part of the family so don't forget them when creating your family's disaster plan. There are three things you can do to help keep your pets safe.

Number one: Include items for your pet in your emergency supply kit including a week's worth of food, a gallon of water, medications, medical records and a pet carrier.

Two: Practice getting your pet in a carrier or on a leash before disaster strikes. You'll want your pet to feel comfortable in case you are displaced from your home and they need to spend an extended amount of time away.

Three: Include a tag with your contact information and a tag with a name and number of a friend or family member who lives outside your immediate area.

A little preparation with your pets will go a long way in an emergency.
