

Emergency Kit – Safety Action Center

To prepare for wildfire season we are urging every household to have a ready-to-go kit in case of emergency or if PG&E has to turn off power because of extreme weather conditions.

One: make sure you have enough water for all family members. Start with one gallon of water per person, per day; You should plan for a minimum of three days.

Two: make sure you have non-perishable food that is easy to prepare and that can last a minimum of three days.

Three: have a flashlight and a radio that is battery-powered and don't forget to pack the extra batteries.

Four: have a first aid kit that includes enough supplies to manage minor injuries.

Five: make sure you have a supply of medications and medical items that you might need if you have to leave your house.

Finally, make sure you have gas in your car and cash in your wallet.

By taking these easy steps you'll be better prepared should an emergency strike.

To learn more ways to prepare for an emergency or power outage download the full checklist at safetyactioncenter.pge.com.